Best Mobile Apps For iPhone And Android · Your iPhone, iPad or.Q: Can't find any answer to this tricky question. It doesn't go with the flow I'm trying to solve this: This question doesn't go with the flow of the rest of the questions. The book says that " $\cos(2\theta)$ is always between 0 and 1 ." I don't see how to work with the fact that cosine is periodic, but I also feel like that's the trick. Could you please explain why this isn't the case? A: It is a mistake. The range of the cosine function is not $[0,1]$ but the positive numbers. Get breaking news alerts and special reports. The news and stories that matter, delivered weekday mornings. BEIJING — A Chinese court on Monday sentenced a 30-year-old man to death on charges of murder for stabbing and bludgeoning his girlfriend to death, state media reported. Xiao Hui, 30, was convicted of murdering 23-year-old Li Dan in a November 2016 attack in the central city of Xi'an in the Shaanxi province, state broadcaster CCTV said. He had confessed to the crime, CCTV added.

TRUSTPilot is one of the best mediators out there, but we really want something we can see and use. Unfortunately the current version isn't complete, and this is a major problem, because it limits the power of the tool, because you can't really see why something is good or bad until you've used it. The current version mostly just shows any votes that say "Unlike". "Unlike" is the default for new users, and that's fine for users who don't know what they're doing, but as a professional user of the tool, we want to be able to see what people think about our entries, and how many other people think they're interesting. So our version of TRUSTPilot will allow us to do that, and it will allow you to see who's like us, and who's not, and who's looking to see your entries, and who's just not interested. I can't believe he's spent any time on another stupid video. It might amuse some people, but I wouldn't call it funny. It's like an idiot clown sitting behind his desk at a piano. Yeah, it gets a laugh out of some people, but I'm finding it more annoying as time passes. What's even funnier is that yes, you can make money from commercials, but the sad part is the real money in commercials is what I've been doing on YouTube for years. It's very sad, that just like the internet, it's gotten to the point where if a person doesn't work as hard as I do for no money, they get a lot of money. I'm in the top 10% of people who make money online, and I'm averaging $100,000 a month, that's a lot of money, but if most people who make money just did what I do, I would need to publish at least 100 videos a day just to make what I am now. That's ludicrous. That's probably why the clowns are still behind their desks. I mean, I get it. They're laughing, that's great. But if they're laughing, why don't they get up, stand at their desks, and do something? I'm one of the people who laugh, and even if I don't like the video, it's better than what he's doing now, so I just give it a
